"Reconnect"

This session is an interactive session and a chance for us all to reconnect. We will all have a chance to recognise where we are now and where we have come from. From this we will have the opportunity to reimagine, reengage and recreate. To hear and understand that we are only as powerful as the stories we tell. Jaz will tell her own powerful story to show you how important it is to connect with our why. To understand the value we bring and that with courage and creativity we can bring positive change to ourselves, our schools and our children.

"Reimagine"

Building on reconnecting with our why we will take our learning into transformational trios to learn with our colleagues. You will reflect on our why. We will work together to be creative and exploring the elements of our work that are important to us, what we are proud of and how we want to be.

1215 LUNCH - Exhibition viewing time.

"Recreate"

What's happening next? Change. We will create a roadmap journey with 'SWAG' intentions for what we want for our schools. The process of making an impact map is a creative one so it's okay to make some slightly left-field and wild suggestions to achieve what we need. Our discussions should eventually align everyone towards a final set of actions and how they can be made a reality.

1430 Tea & Exhibition viewing time.

"Renewed"

We will reflect on the day and the renewed energy and passion we have for our schools and our roles. We will feel that we have been able to future-proof ourselves by reconnecting with our WHY and be planning a route that allows us to make the difference we desire

Day Two

Delegates could be milling around anytime before the conference commences.

Dare to be Different: A steamy cafe and a most unusual road sign.

Laughter is guaranteed in this fun and interactive opening session we will explore what we (the people in the room) believe about the best schools and classrooms. From this point we will start to explore how our best leaders take these beliefs and then use the art of inside out leadership to create personalised learning communities where everybody thinks they can achieve, have a duty to achieve and a duty to help others achieve. Some attention (but not too much) will be placed on Ofsted's current views about leadership and the curriculum and how it might be possible to create a curriculum where teachers are prepared to take an unusual idea and run with it in order to create greater levels of imagination and engagement in learners. The session will incorporate case studies from the school's where I work on a regular basis.

1215 LUNCH - Exhibition viewing time.

Dare to be Different: What Brian learned at the Movies.

During the second part of the session we will look at the concept of the three generational lesson which is a key feature in my most recent book. The three generational lesson is a lesson which is that good it has the capacity to remain with the learners forever more.

Children will burst through the doors to tell their parents all about, then in the future they will tell their own children about it, and the memories will still be there when they are grandparents. We will look at unusual ways of planning such lessons... and then I will seek to demonstrate some of these techniques through the theme of 'leadership'. Sadly, the last half hour of this session is covered by 'The Official Secrets Act' and it is not possible to divulge further information... apparently there have been too many leaks recently.

Leadership Dialogues - let's talk!

Dave will pull together the strands from the past two days - check that all the key aims have been met and will encourage table discussions about the next steps of partnership working for the group.... Onwards & upwards.....
